

Results of the research experiments

Marian Petruk

May 19 2017

During the experiments, the data were collected from many of The World Bank indicators. Every indicator provides the data structured by time and country. The data can be analysed in order to make conclusions and search for some interesting correlations or facts. This data are useful to analyse and compare the trends with historical events and political decisions as well as to determine factors which support progress in the development of the country.